The Demolition of the Eiffel Tower

The tragicomedy, The Demolition of the Eiffel Tower, addresses one of the modern world's most significant problems— terrorism arising as a consequence of global political and religious conflicts. In this play, Neziraj confronts cultural divisions, misunderstandings, religious fanaticism, violence, and issues regarding of democracy and individual freedom in Europe. Above all, the play highlights misunderstandings, stereotypes, and prejudices created as a consequence of the burka conflict in Paris. In a contemporary urban landscape, we follow the weird story of a European, who is kidnapped by two Islamic terrorists because he insists on removing burkas from the heads of Muslim women in Paris. Meanwhile, as if in a fairy tale from the past, in a parallel story, an Ottoman soldier is ordered by the Sultan to distribute burkas to recently- converted Balkan women. The Demolition of the Eiffel Tower is an alternative to the mainstream media's fixation on the burka; the play opens discourse on the most substantive issue – to know and understand the drama of the other.
